Describe the passengers and the complete luggage load together before confirming an arrangement. The booking organizer may be unavailable during travel. Contact Limo LLC provides airport transportation between Kenosha and O'Hare. Use these details to discuss the actual journey and keep any point still needing confirmation visible.

Make the passenger contact independent of the organizer

Give the lead traveler the current flight and transportation information before the organizer becomes unavailable. Identify which person can answer a question about the address and which traveler can communicate about readiness or location. Keep private access instructions with the people who need them. If an update is still being discussed, label that point as unresolved and explain who will finish the conversation. A complete handoff gives the traveling party the agreed practical details without turning the organizer into a required relay for every question.

Count every traveler in the party

Start with the actual passenger list, including children and anyone joining at a different pickup point. If the group is still deciding who will travel, say so. A tentative headcount should stay visibly tentative until the transportation arrangement is confirmed for the final group.

Contact Limo's own luxury SUVs seat up to six or seven passengers depending on the vehicle. That seating information is not a universal luggage allowance or a promise of a particular vehicle for a reservation. Ask about the arrangement for your passengers and their belongings together rather than filling seats first and considering cargo afterward.

Describe bags by type and size

List checked suitcases, cabin bags and smaller personal items separately. If the group has an unusually large suitcase, a folding stroller or equipment, describe it directly. Avoid a shorthand such as normal luggage when the people reading the request cannot see the bags you mean.

Ask group members to report what they plan to bring instead of estimating on their behalf. One traveler might mean a small shoulder bag while another means a large checked case. A consolidated list gives the organizer something concrete to review and lets any change be communicated as an update to the whole trip.

Raise child-seat requests early

Child and booster seats are available on request. Explain the request when discussing the reservation and confirm the arrangement with the team. Do not leave this as a note the lead traveler intends to mention only at the pickup address.

When a child joins the party, review both the seating and cargo description again. A seat request, stroller and additional bag can affect more than the passenger count. If you are uncertain Kenosha to O'Hare limo how to describe an item, provide its dimensions or ask what information would help the team assess the trip.

Recheck the return journey separately

The return from O'Hare may involve a different group or a different luggage mix. Some passengers may continue elsewhere, while others may bring additional belongings home. Record the return load on its own rather than assuming it matches the departure from Kenosha.

Before confirming the trip, read the passenger and luggage list alongside the flight and address details. Ask the team to confirm the proposed arrangement and availability. If someone later adds a large item or another traveler, send a revised list. Keeping that information current is more useful than relying on a general vehicle description, and it gives the team a clear basis for discussing the airport transfer.
