Tree Debris a Grapple Truck Can Handle

Typical loads include cut branches, oak limbs, pine sections, palm fronds, trunk pieces, brush, vines, and debris produced by property clearing. Grapple equipment can lift material directly into the truck, reducing the time and labor required for manual loading.

Very large logs, root balls, stumps, dirt-covered material, or mixed waste may require special planning. Send photos and measurements so the company can determine whether the debris is suitable for grapple loading.

Tree Limb Pickup Near Homes and Businesses

Customers searching for tree limb pickup near me may have debris at a residence, rental property, commercial site, apartment community, construction project, or vacant lot. The ideal loading area is level, reachable from the truck, and clear of overhead lines. Material piled behind narrow gates or deep inside a property may need bobcat assistance to move it into reach.

Combining Bobcat and Grapple Truck Service

When debris is scattered across a large yard or wooded lot, bobcat equipment can gather and stage the material before the grapple truck arrives. This combination is useful for large tree debris pickup, storm cleanup, lot clearing, and projects where logs are too heavy to move by hand.

How Pricing Is Usually Affected

Price can depend on pile volume, weight, wood size, loading time, access, travel distance, disposal charges, and whether additional equipment is required. A clean pile of vegetation is generally easier to quote than a mixed pile containing soil, trash, metal, or construction material.
