Who Can Be Held Responsible for a Tractor-Trailer Crash?

A tractor-trailer crash often involves more than one responsible party. The driver, the trucking company, the owner of the trailer, the company that loaded the cargo and the manufacturer of a defective part can each play a role. Working out who is legally responsible is an early task for a truck accident attorney, because each responsible party may have separate insurance.

The driver's conduct

Most claims start with the driver's conduct, such as speeding, following too closely, unsafe lane changes, distraction, impairment or fatigue. Commercial drivers need a commercial driver's license (CDL) under 49 CFR Part 383 and follow the driving rules in 49 CFR Part 392, including restrictions on texting and hand-held phone use. A violation of a safety rule does not prove fault on its own, but in many states it can be evidence of negligence, and some states apply negligence per se. A truck wreck lawyer compares the driver's conduct against these rules.

Liability of the trucking company

If the driver is an employee working within the scope of the job, the trucking company is generally answerable for the driver's negligence under vicarious liability, sometimes called respondeat superior. The company can also face direct claims for its own conduct, such as negligent hiring, negligent retention, negligent supervision and negligent entrustment. The Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations require a driver qualification https://atlantatruckaccidentlawyers.wiki/checking-a-firms-truck-practice/ file under 49 CFR Part 391, drug and alcohol testing under 49 CFR Part 382, and systematic inspection, repair and maintenance under 49 CFR Part 396. Gaps in those records can support a direct claim against the company, and for a truck accident lawyer the driver qualification file is often one of the first documents requested.

Leased trucks and owner-operators

Many owner-operators lease their trucks to a trucking company. The leasing rules in 49 CFR Part 376 require the lease to give the trucking company exclusive possession, control and use of the equipment during the lease, which can matter when the company argues the driver was an independent contractor. The USDOT number and name marked on the cab, the bill of lading and the lease itself help show which company was operating the truck. An 18-wheeler accident attorney typically requests these documents atlanta truck accident lawyer early.

Other companies in the shipment

Shifting or falling cargo can contribute to rollovers and jackknife crashes. The cargo securement rules in 49 CFR Part 393 set standards for tiedowns and load securement, and in some cases a shipper or loading company that controlled the loading may share responsibility. Claims against a freight broker that arranged the shipment raise separate questions, including federal preemption, and the answer depends on the claim and the facts.

Manufacturers and repair shops

If brakes, tires, steering parts or an underride guard fail because of a defect, the manufacturer may face a product liability claim. A maintenance contractor that performed faulty repairs can also be named. Separating a defect from poor maintenance usually means inspecting the parts before they are repaired or scrapped.

Insurance and shared fault

Under 49 CFR Part 387, for-hire interstate trucks with a gross vehicle weight rating of 10,001 pounds or more that haul nonhazardous property must carry at least $750,000 in public liability coverage, and higher minimums apply to certain hazardous materials. Most states apply comparative negligence, which may reduce damages by the injured person's percentage of fault, while a few still apply contributory negligence. A commercial truck accident attorney looks at every party because one policy may not cover the full loss. This is general information rather than legal advice, and no result can be predicted from it.
